

Turning Point's sponsorship of the 2008 Sorenson Champions Challenge, held just outside of Salt Lake City, helped gain valuable exposure for the Core Trainer and feedback from the experts.

Johnny Miller

Johnny Miller hosted and played in the event which attracted many well known golfers and amateurs.

Between rounds, a number of professional and amateur golfers had the opportunity to experience the Core Trainer under the guidance of Roger

The Core Trainer was well located in the clubhouse of Thanksgiving Point, a Johnny Miller signature course.

Knick, PGA Professional & member of the Turning Point's Advisory Board, and Earl Van Wagoner, Turning Point's Chief Engineer & Designer.

Reactions were consistently positive. The equipment's benefit for both conditioning the "core" and training the muscle memory required in the golf swing was readily appreciated. All agreed that the Core Trainer helped develop the important separation between the hips and shoulders that generates consistent power.

And the winners were - Dave Stockton Jr. and his father who beat Johnny Miller and his son in a sudden death playoff.

Dave Stockton Jr.

With Roger's guidance, Dave experienced the full capabilities of the Core Trainer and gave us a deeper understanding as to how it can benefit the professional golfer.

Thanks to introductions gained at the Challenge, individual follow up meetings are being scheduled with other pros.

Deron Williams, Utah Jazz point guard, member of the 2008 USA Olympic Basketball team and aspiring golfer played in the Challenge and got a good workout on the Core Trainer.
